Editor-in-Chief

Journal of American Society for Mass Spectrometry

Call for Nominations
Please apply by October 15, 2021

Journal of American Society for Mass Spectrometry (JASMS) is the peer-reviewed journal owned by ASMS and published by ACS Publications. The journal has a circulation of approximately 7,500 ASMS members worldwide, plus a strong presence in libraries and institutions through publishing consortia managed by ACS Publications. The Editor-in-Chief leads an editorial team consisting of six prestigious Associate Editors and an Editorial Board of 24-36 scientists. The Editor-in-Chief and Associate Editors are assisted by support and editorial staff of the Publisher.

Journal of American Society for Mass Spectrometry (JASMS) is seeking candidates for the position of Editor-in-Chief for a term to commence July, 2022.

Criteria for candidates include, but are not limited to:
• Excellent and sustained publication record
• Member of long standing and active participant in ASMS
• Research active
• Broad perspective of field
• Desire and ability to spend time and energy leading and promoting the journal
• Willingness to relinquish editorial responsibilities in all other journals

Timeline
• October 15, 2021: Deadline for nominations
• January 31, 2022: Completion of selection
• March – June, 2022: Transition overlap with current Editor-in-Chief
• July 1, 2022 – December 31, 2027: Five and a half year contract of new Editor-in-Chief

To nominate, please send a one-page description of professional background and interest in becoming Editor-in-Chief to info@asms.org by October 15, 2021. Self-nominations are encouraged.